1. The first group of authors (e.g., [1, 2]) has shown that the use of a single, common, and simple model for all the components of the system is not only possible but also useful. This approach is based on the assumption that the system is a single, unified whole, and the components are not independent of each other. The main advantage of this approach is its simplicity and ease of implementation. The main disadvantage is that it does not take into account the specific characteristics of the components and the system as a whole.
